

HELP! I've been in a wreck.

SHOULD I CALL A PERSONAL INJURY LAWYER?

TAKE OUR QUIZ TO FIND OUT

Answer yes or no to the following questions:

- 1. Do you have expected medical bills and lost wages of at least $2,000?
- 2. Is there visible damage to your car?
- 3. Was the accident someone else's fault?
- 4. Did you get prompt medical treatment?
- 5. Have you followed your doctor's recommended treatment plan?
- 6. Did the accident happen less than 18 months ago?

SCORING:

If you answered yes to three or more questions, you should speak with a personal injury attorney.

If the wreck was your fault, involved only property damage, or caused very minor injuries, you may be OK handling things yourself.

For major injuries, you need the knowledge of an experienced law firm on your side. Too much can go wrong, and the insurance company will look for ways to reduce your claim or deny it.

WHAT ELSE SHOULD I KNOW?

- A personal injury law firm is built to handle personal injury cases, which are time-consuming and complex.
- Your case could end up going to trial. If that happens, you need an experienced personal injury firm to gather depositions from witnesses and experts and build a strategy to present to the judge or jury.
- You don't want to risk your financial future by going it alone with a major accident or injury case.
